Black Ops 2 Zombies Tranzit Guide

When the Tranzit map first dropped in *Call of Duty: Black /Ops,/Ithe community was buzzing with excitement. A sprawling, multi level subway system that stretched across the globe, Tranzit offered a fresh take on the classic Zombies experience. But with its maze like tunnels, hidden rooms, and endless supply of power ups, many players found themselves lost in the labyrinth of trains and tunnels. This guide is designed to help you navigate every corner of Tranzit, master its weapons and power ups, and ultimately conquer the endless horde.

Understanding the Tranzit Map Layout

Tranzit is split into three distinct zones: the London Underground, the Paris Metro, and the Berlin U Rail Each zone is connected by a series of underground tunnels, and the layout is intentionally symmetrical to keep the gameplay balanced. Here's a quick breakdown of what you'll find in each zone:

- London Underground – The starting zone, featuring iconic stations like "Westminster" and "Baker Street." It's the easiest area to navigate for newcomers.
- Paris Metro – Known for its tighter corridors and the infamous "Sainte Catherine" station, where you'll find one of the first major power ups.
- Berlin U Rail – The toughest of the three, with multiple levels and a final boss that tests your endurance and strategy.

Each zone contains a Power Roomthat offers a unique power when activated. The key to mastering Tranzit is to master the power rooms, because the power you choose can make or break your run.

Getting Started: The Basics of Tranzit Zombies

1. Selecting Your Power

Tranzit gives you a choice between three powerful abilities: Holographic Decoys, Parabolic Laser, and EMP Shockwave. Each power has its own strengths and weaknesses. For beginners, the EMP Shockwaveis a good starting point because it deals damage to all zombies in a radius, giving you time to regroup.

2. The Tranzit Save Points

Unlike the traditional Zombies maps that rely on a single save point, Tranzit features multiple Save Stations scattered across each zone. These stations are located near the power rooms and major intersections. Visiting a save station will preserve your inventory, weapons, and points, so always make a habit of checking for one every time you move to a new zone.

3. Weapon Loadout

Tranzit introduces a new set of weapons that are tailored to the map's environment. Some of the most popular choices include:

- Railgun – High damage and good for taking out larger zombies.
- Shotgun (Double Barrel) – Excellent for close quarters combat in the narrow tunnels.
- HMG (Heavy Machine Gun) – Great for crowd control when you're surrounded.

Remember, the Point System in Tranzit rewards you for killing zombies quickly, so try to keep your kills efficient and avoid lingering.

Power Rooms and Their Secrets

London Power Room – Holographic Decoys

The Holographic Decoys power creates a clone that lures zombies away from you. This is especially useful in the London Underground where the crowd can quickly become overwhelming. To activate, you'll need to locate the power room's control panel and feed the required points. Once activated, the decoy will remain for 30 seconds, giving you a breather to reload or reposition.

Paris Power Room – Parabolic Laser

The Parabolic Laser is a game changer in the Paris Metro. It fires a beam that travels along the track, damaging zombies in its path. This power is perfect for clearing out the "Sainte Catherine" station, where zombies are densely packed. Keep in mind that the laser consumes a large amount of points, so use it strategically.

Berlin Power Room – EMP Shockwave

In the Berlin U Rail, the EMP Shockwave power can disable all zombies in a large radius, making it ideal for the final boss battle. This power is especially effective in the multi level Berlin tunnels where you can trap zombies and then blast them all at once.

Key Points and How to Earn Them

Points are the lifeblood of Tranzit. They are used for:

1. Activating powers
2. Purchasing weapons
3. Buying upgrades
4. Saving your progress

Here are some proven ways to rack up points quickly:

- Efficient Killing – Aim for headshots and use weapons that deal high damage per shot.
- Combo Chains – Killing multiple zombies in a short period increases your combo multiplier.
- Point Boost Items – Keep an eye out for the "Point Boost" items that appear randomly in the map.
- Save Points – Saving your game often gives you a small point bonus.

Advanced Strategies for Mastering Tranzit

1. The "Train Ride" Tactic

Tranzit's train system can be used to your advantage. By moving from one station to another quickly, you can keep the zombies at bay and maintain a high kill rate. Use the Railgun or Shotgun to take out zombies on the train cars, then move to the next station. This keeps the flow of the game moving and reduces the chance of getting surrounded.

2. "Zone Lockdown" Technique

When you're approaching a power room, close off the entrance with a Point based Door. This forces zombies to funnel through a narrow corridor, making them easier to kill. It also gives you a chance to activate the power without being ambushed.

3. “Dual Power” Strategy

Tranzit allows you to carry two powers at the same time. Combining the EMP Shockwave with the Parabolic Laser can create a devastating combo. First, use the EMP to clear the area, then fire the laser to finish off any remaining zombies.

4. “Resource Management”

Because Tranzit has multiple zones, you need to manage your ammo and health carefully. Keep a stockpile of Health Packs in the London Underground and use the Berlin Power Room to restore health when you’re low. Ammo can be replenished by buying from the vending machines located in each zone.

Common Mistakes to Avoid

- Ignoring Save Stations – Not saving your progress can cost you valuable points and progress.
- Over reliance on One Weapon – Diversify your arsenal to handle different zombie types.
- Underestimating the Final Boss – The Berlin boss is a formidable foe; make sure you’re fully upgraded before engaging.
- Failing to Use Power Rooms Effectively – Save your points for the power rooms rather than spending them on minor upgrades.

FAQs About Tranzit Zombies

1. How many points do I need to activate a power?

Power activation costs vary by power and zone. Typically, the EMP Shockwave costs 25,000 points, the Parabolic Laser costs 30,000 points, and the Holographic Decoys costs 20,000 points.

2. Can I carry more than one weapon?

Yes, you can carry up to three weapons at a time. It’s recommended to have a mix of close quarters and long range weapons.

3. What’s the best weapon for the Berlin U Rail?

The Railgun is highly effective due to its high damage and ability to hit zombies from a distance.

4. How do I get the final boss in Berlin?

After clearing the Berlin Power Room and activating the EMP Shockwave, the final boss will appear in the central tunnel. Be prepared with high damage weapons and ample ammo.

Conclusion

Tranzit is a thrilling and challenging map that demands both skill and strategy. By mastering the map layout, understanding the power rooms, and employing advanced tactics such as the “Train Ride” and “Zone Lockdown” techniques, you’ll be well on your way to becoming a top-tier Black /Ops /II Zombies player. Remember to save often, manage your points wisely, and keep your weapon loadout diverse. With practice and perseverance, you’ll conquer the endless hordes and unlock every secret Tranzit has to offer.
