How to Draw Funny Faces Step by Step: A Complete Guide for Beginners

Ever wanted to bring a smile to someone's face with a quick doodle? Whether you're an aspiring illustrator, a teacher looking for a fun classroom activity, or just a creative soul craving a new hobby, learning how to draw funny faces can be a delightful and rewarding experience. This guide walks you through the process from scratch, breaking down each element into clear, manageable steps. By the end, you'll have a toolbox of techniques that will let you create humorous faces in any style you like—cartoonish, realistic, or anything in between.

What You'll Need

Before you start sketching, gather a few simple supplies. You don't need anything fancy: a pencil, eraser, paper, and a ruler are enough to get the basics right. If you want to add color, keep a set of colored pencils or markers handy. For those who prefer digital art, a tablet or drawing software will work just as well.

- Graphite pencils (HB or 2B)
- Sharpener and eraser (kneaded eraser is a bonus)
- Sketch paper or a drawing tablet
- Colored pencils, markers, or digital brushes (optional)
- Ruler (for precise lines)

Step 1: Start with Simple Shapes

Every great drawing begins with a foundation. When you're aiming for a funny face, begin by sketching an oval or circle for the head. Keep the shape loose; it's a guideline, not a final form. Add a horizontal line across the middle to indicate the eye level and a vertical line down the center for symmetry. These guidelines help you keep facial features balanced, which is crucial for a convincing expression.

Step 2: Position the Eyes

Eyes are the windows to emotion. For a comedic effect, exaggerate the eye size or placement. Draw two large circles or ovals on either side of the vertical line, slightly overlapping the horizontal guideline. Add a smaller circle inside each for the pupil. To make the face more expressive, tilt the eyes or add a squint. Remember: wide, round eyes often convey surprise or excitement, while narrowed eyes can suggest mischief.

Step 3: Add the Nose

Fun noses come in many shapes—small, flat, or even oversized. Place the nose below the eye line, centered on the vertical axis. A simple curved line or a tiny triangle works well for a cartoonish look. If you want a more realistic touch, sketch a gentle bump or a slight indentation. For exaggerated humor, make the nose unusually tall or wide, and play with the nostrils for added character.

Step 4: Create the Mouth

The mouth is the heart of a funny face. Start with a horizontal line for the mouth's base. Then, decide on the expression: a wide grin, a goofy grin, or a dramatic pout. Draw the corners of the mouth high or low to convey the desired emotion. For a classic “laughing” face, curve the lips upward and add a small line at the center to indicate a tooth or a smile line. Don’t forget to leave space for the tongue or cheek if you’re aiming for an even sillier look.

Step 5: Add Eyebrows and Extra Details

Eyebrows add personality. Draw them above the eyes, varying the thickness and angle. A raised brow can indicate surprise, while a slanted brow suggests curiosity or sarcasm. To increase humor, make the eyebrows unusually thick or thin, or add a single eyebrow that looks like it’s winking. Small details like dimples, freckles, or a goofy mustache can elevate the comedic effect.

Step 6: Outline the Face

Once you’re satisfied with the internal features, trace the outline of the head. Smooth out the edges, making sure the shape matches the style you’re aiming for—rounded for cartoons, slightly angular for caricatures. Remove the internal guidelines with a clean eraser. At this point, the face should have a clear silhouette that invites further embellishment.

Step 7: Add Texture and Shading

Shading gives depth and dimension. Use a softer pencil (2B or 4B) to add light shadows under the cheekbones, along the jawline, and beneath the chin. For a more playful look, you can use cross-hatching or stippling to create a textured effect. If you’re coloring, decide on a color palette that complements the mood—bright hues for a vibrant laugh, or muted tones for a subtle grin.

Step 8: Color Your Creation

Coloring can transform a simple sketch into a lively illustration. Start with a base color for the skin, then add highlights and shadows to emphasize facial features. For a cartoon style, use solid colors with minimal shading. If you’re going realistic, blend the colors to mimic natural skin tones. Don’t forget to color the eyes, lips, and hair, as these elements can make your face stand out.

Step 9: Practice Makes Perfect

Drawing funny faces is an art that improves with repetition. Try different expressions—surprised, mischievous, bewildered—and experiment with varying the size and shape of features. Keep a sketchbook dedicated to facial studies, and review your progress over time. The more you practice, the more intuitive the process will become.

Common Mistakes to Avoid

- Neglecting the head’s overall shape: a distorted head can ruin the humor.
- Forgetting to keep the eyes in proportion: too small or too large can look off.
- Overusing lines: too many details can clutter the face.
- Not leaving space for expression: a flat face lacks personality.
- Using a single style for all faces: variety keeps the drawings engaging.

Inspiration Sources

Looking for fresh ideas? Browse comic strips, caricature galleries, or online illustration communities. Study how famous cartoonists exaggerate features for comedic effect. You can also draw inspiration from everyday life—observe people's expressions in traffic, at a café, or during a movie. Translating real-life quirks into your drawings adds authenticity and humor.

Conclusion

Drawing funny faces step by step is a fun, creative process that anyone can master with practice and patience. By breaking down the face into simple shapes, adding expressive eyes, a quirky nose, and a mouth that tells a story, you'll create illustrations that delight and entertain. Remember to keep your lines clean, experiment with exaggeration, and most importantly, enjoy the process. Happy drawing!
