Introduction

When you travel to China, meet a Chinese friend, or simply want to expand your language skills, one of the first phrases you'll learn is "yes." In English, "yes" is a single word that can be used in countless situations. In Chinese, however, the concept of affirmation is a little more nuanced. There are several ways to say yes, each suited to a particular context, level of formality, and tone of voice. Understanding these differences will help you communicate more naturally, avoid misunderstandings, and show respect for Chinese culture.

This article will walk you through the most common ways to say yes in Mandarin Chinese, explain how pronunciation and tone affect meaning, explore the written characters, and provide cultural insights that will deepen your appreciation for the language. By the end, you'll be equipped to respond confidently in any situation—whether you're ordering food, accepting an invitation, or simply answering a question.

1. The Basic "Yes" in Mandarin

1.1 ‹ô (Shu Ò' b "to say"

In everyday conversation, the most straightforward way to say yes is "f/" (shì)It literally means "to be" or "to agree," and it functions as a universal affirmative in most contexts. For example:

- Q: O`Uœk"•ÙN*y<riT ÿ (N •Đhu â ¦Ž†vR ÁĐwù ma?) – "Do you like this gift?"
- A: f/ (Shì) – "Yes."

1.2 N_ (Y ²' b "also" or "too"

When you want to say "yes" in response to a suggestion or statement, you can use "N_" (yě)which means "also" or "too." It signals agreement or addition:

- Q: O`N_geT ÿ (N ' lái ma?) – "Will you come too?"
- A: N_ (Y ²' b "Yes."

1.3 _Sq6 (D æw. â' b "of course"

For a more emphatic affirmation, especially when you want to express enthusiasm or certainty, use "_Sq6" (d æwlâ•literally translates to "naturally" or "obviously," but in conversation it functions as "yes."

- Q: O`O ‹ôN-e‡T ÿ (N ‡^Â 6‡QM zh Öæwpén ma?) – "Can you speak Chinese?"
- A: _Sq6 (D æprán) – "Of course."

2. Formal vs. Informal Contexts

Chinese culture places a strong emphasis on respect and hierarchy. Consequently, the way you say yes can change depending on whether you're speaking to a friend, a colleague, or a superior.

2.1 Formal "Yes" – "Y}v„" (H æò FR•

The phrase "Y}v„" (h æò FR•is commonly used in formal settings. It literally means "good" or "okay," but it functions as a polite affirmative. It's often used in business meetings, official emails, or when you want to show respect:

- Q: ‹÷`¨{~[W0 (Q ær îÖâ ‘ nzì.) – “Please sign.”
- A: Y}v„ (H æò FR’ b “Yes.”

2.2 Informal “Yes” – “ˆL” (Xíng) or “ˆLUJ” (Xíng a)

When speaking with friends or peers, you can use “ˆL” (xíng) which means “okay” or “fine.” Adding “UJ” (a) softens the tone and makes it more casual.

- Q: O`NÊfZN •wS»w u5_qT ÿ (N ¡+nw æâ ‘+q ’ ¾ â Fž ày ær Ö ò’ b “Will you go watch a movie tonight?”
- A: ˆLUJ (Xíng a) – “Sure.”

2.3 Polite “Yes” – “SïNå” (K ·‘Ð)

When you want to indicate that something is possible or permissible, use “SïNå” (kě‘Ð), a versatile phrase that can be used in both formal and informal contexts:

- Q: b SïNå^._ÙT ÿ (W " ± y ! ngmáng ma?) – “Can I help?”
- A: SïNå (K ·‘Ð) – “Yes, you can.”

3. Situational Variations

Beyond the basic and formal expressions, Chinese has several situational ways to say yes that reflect the nuances of everyday life.

3.1 “l¡•î˜˜” (Méi wèntí) – “No problem”

Use this when you want to assure someone that you’re comfortable with their request:

- Q: O`€ý^.b d,•ÙN*{±[PT ÿ (N î–ær ! ng w " ! n zhège xi æw¦’ Ö ò’ b “Can you help me move this box?”
- A: l¡•î˜˜ (Méi wèntí) – “No problem.”

3.2 “l¡N‹” (Méi shì) – “It’s fine”

When someone apologizes for a mistake, you can respond with “l¡N‹” (méi shì) to convey that it’s all good.

- Q: [ùN •wÿ b •ßR0N†0 (Duìbùq Â qÒ chídào le.) – “I’m sorry, I’m late.”
- A: l¡N‹ (Méi shì) – “It’s fine.”

3.3 “_Sq6SïNå” (D æw. â ± y ’ b “Of course you can”

When you want to give enthusiastic permission, combine the formal “_Sq6” with the possibility “SïNå.”

- Q: b SïNåS»O`v„m>[ùT ÿ (W " ± y ’ áÐ de pàiduì ma?) – “Can I go to your party?”
- A: _Sq6SïNå (D æprán k ·‘Ð) – “Of course you can.”

4. Pronunciation and Tone

Mandarin Chinese is a tonal language, meaning that the pitch contour of a syllable can change its meaning. The word “f/” (shì) is pronounced with a falling tone, while “f/” (shì) in other contexts might have a different tone. Let’s look at the most common affirmative words and their tones.

4.1 Tone Chart for Common “Yes” Words

Word	Pinyin	Tone
