Who Is Linda Lael Miller?

Linda Lael Miller was born on December 1, 1954, in the small town of Bismarck, North Dakota. Growing up in the Great Plains, she developed an early fascination with the stories of cowboys, pioneers, and the supernatural that she heard from family and friends. After earning a degree in English from North Dakota State University, Miller pursued a career in teaching before turning her passion for storytelling into a full time writing career in the early 1990s.

Her debut novel, Witch of the West, was published in 1992 and immediately established her as a formidable voice in the fantasy genre. Over the next three decades, Miller has released a diverse array of works, ranging from standalone romances to multi book series that weave intricate plots across generations. Critics praise her ability to craft vivid, relatable characters while maintaining a sense of wonder and adventure.

Miller's stories often feature strong female protagonists, themes of destiny versus choice, and a deep respect for nature and the supernatural. She frequently sets her narratives in the American West, blending the mystique
