Why Bengali Font Matters for Tagore’s Poetry

Tagore’s poems were penned in the rich, expressive script of Bengali, a language that itself carries centuries of literary heritage. - Appreciate the visual harmony between form and meaning.

The Essence of Bengali Script

Bengali script, derived from the Brahmi family, is written from left to right and features a distinctive horizontal headline that ties letters together. This headline, known as the shirorekha, gives the script a unified aesthetic that is both elegant and legible. The script’s phonetic precision allows poets like Tagore to manipulate sound patterns, creating resonant musicality that can be felt even before the words are fully understood.
